

The Newfoundland and Labrador Defense League and the people of Newfoundland and Labrador request that the Parliament of Canada recognize our province as a “Nation within a united Canada”. An equivalent motion regarding Quebec was adopted on November 27, 2006 by a vote of 266-16. We believe that having once been an independent nation in our own right, the people of Newfoundland and Labrador deserve to be given this designation and acceptance by the Canadian government and the people of Canada.

Our music, literature, art, history, and way of life are unique. To say that Newfoundlanders and Labradorians are not unique and worthy of being accepted as a nation is to say that a society developed over hundreds of years has become unrecognizable after only 57 years of confederation... and that would be a sad statement for the people of Canada to make.
